WINTER SPORTS PROGRAM UNDER WAY FOR MIDDIES WITH VICTORY PROMISED

By HUGH R. RILEY.

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 12.—The athletic policy of the Naval Academy for a number of years has been to aim at the top and to endeavor to secure a test in all branches of sports by meeting the best in that particular line. This is particularly true in winter sports, in which, for several years past, the general showing of the Naval Academy has not been approached by any other institution.

Basketball, boxing, wrestling, swimming, water polo, gymnastics and fencing are the sports generally termed "winter," and in four of these, the midshipmen have been in undoubted first place for two and fencing are the sports generally termed "winter," and in four of these, the midshipmen have been in undoubted first place for two consecutive seasons. The sports in which they have been first are wrestling, boxing, gymnastics and fencing. They have made a very good showing in basketball and swimming, and made an auspicious start in water polo, in which they have engaged two seasons.

The Naval Academy has joined college organizations in these sports where practicable and where it has been admitted to membership. It is a member in full standing of the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association.

Meets Good Foes.

In nearly every branch of sport, however, the Naval Academy has been able to obtain a list of games which will guarantee its teams a basis of comparison with the best teams in the different lines of sport, and to assure a number of events of the highest interest this winter. While the Academy teams will do much more traveling than usual, the majority of the contests will still be in Annapolis.
